Caring for your Karl Donoghue piece

The shearling, leather and fur used in our pieces are all natural skins making each product unique. Variations in texture and shade are intrinsic qualities of such materials and should not be regarded as defects.

There are many different types of fur including raccoon, fox, rabbit, mink, and squirrel, all offering various qualities. These furs can be knitted, stripped, panelled, grooved and sheared. All fur used in our products is farmed.

- If caught in the rain, shake off excess water and allow drying to occur naturally (on a broad shouldered coat hanger if a garment) out of direct sunlight. Using heat will cause both fur and leather to dry out. After it is dry, shake again to fluff the fur.
- Knitted fur like hand knitwear can be susceptible to snagging. Take extra care when wearing. Fur fibres can transfer to clothing as a result of the hand cutting methods used in the production.
- When your fur piece requires cleaning always use a specialist fur cleaner following the instructions on the care label. It is advisable to remove buttons before cleaning.
- Excess sunlight can cause fur to fade or change colour therefore it is advisable when storing your piece to keep it in the original dust bag. Never store your piece when damp or wet. Store in a low humidity location, never in a closed plastic bag.
